Office/Registration: 540-234-9191 FAX: 540-234-8211

TITLE: Gulla's Weapon Retention And Positional Shooting (G-WRAP) Instructor Course

PRESENTED BY: Arrestling/CSCJTA

LOCATION: CSCJTA (Main Campus) 3045 Lee Highway, Weyers Cave VA, 24486

DATE (S): April 6th-8th, 2020 / 0800 - 1700

Benefits:

- Allows officer to keep weapon out while deciding what level of force is necessary.
- Allows greater ability for even the smallest/weakest officer to maintain control of their duty weapon. Allow time for officer to decide if Deadly Force is Needed.
- Officer can use offense, not just defense to protect their weapon.
- Position helps protect officer against punches and disabling head strikes.
- If suspect attempts to disarm officer, officer is in a position to shoot suspect.
- Officer can strike suspect and still place weapon on effective target areas.
- Officer can cycle another round, should firing again become necessary.

Scenario:

If a suspect approaches an officer, yelling that they are going to take the officer's gun and kill him/her, what does an officer do?

DESCRIPTION: Most would try to keep their weapon in the holster, because they feel it's safer in the holster...until it is too late.

In-holster weapon retention is one of the most taught defensive techniques. But once the officer becomes fatigued, the scale tips in favor of the suspect.

While making distance is an option, once the suspect is grappling with the officer, distance is no longer an option. Or, what if the officer is arresting a DV suspect in a living room, when the suspect tries to take their gun. The greatest distance an officer might have is six feet, allowing a suspect to close the distance quickly.

2018 52 officer fatalities, 31 officers were shot and killed with a handgun;
Four (12%) were disarmed and shot with their own duty weapons

Gulla's Weapon Retention and Positional Shooting wishes to give you another option.
